1. The Bible can be trusted.

What prophecies in the Bible can the members of your group come up with from memory (make a list)?

Have any of these prophecies impacted your life or that of others you know? If so, how?

Accountability question: If you are a parent of a teenager, have you had conversations with your son or daughter about fulfilled prophecies? If not, use this week looking ahead to Christ’s death and resurrection to plan a time to discuss with them why you believe the Bible is trustworthy. Consider adding a book like Mark Mittleberg’s The Questions Christians Hope No One Will Ask (with Answers) to your family library as a resource if you don’t already have one.

2. The God of the Bible can be trusted.

What are some of the questions non-Christians may raise as objections to their trusting Christ as their Savior?

Which ones do you think are more common than others today?

What resources have proven helpful to you in answering their questions?

Which questions have you heard from people you know?

Take time during your small group to pray for those people.
